Final Outcome: Ongoing

Summary:

On 2024/05/19, China's Ministry of Commerce launched an anti-dumping probe into POM copolymers from Taiwan. China found Taiwanese firms guilty of anti-dumping on 2025/01/16, and imposed anti-dumping tariffs on 2025/05/18.

Narrative:

On 2024/05/19, China's Ministry of Commerce launched an anti-dumping probe into POM copolymers from the European Union, United States, Japan and Taiwan.¹

China's move followed US President Biden's decision to increase tariffs on Chinese electric vehicles and solar cells.² It also followed the European Union's battery EV anti-subsidy investigation, which began on 2023/10/04,³ and would eventually conclude with finding China guilty and announcing countervailing tariffs on 2024/06/11.⁴

On 2025/01/16, China announced that it found Taiwan guilty of dumping plastics into the Chinese economy, and that it would impose anti-dumping tariffs on the plastics ranging from 3.8 percent to 32.6 percent.⁵ The sanctions were officially imposed on 2025/05/18, and remain in place.⁶
